NEW YORK - For many families who gather each year for the holidays, reunions are not the joyous, fulfilling experiences of song and story. They are more in he endured and survived.

For some people, the holiday gathering is anticipated with a mixture of dread and guilt. They know all too well that loog-standing parent-child conflicts or sibling rivalries will taint holiday happiness.

Reunioo problems have become exaggerated in receot years with the great increase in divorce and remarriage. Second marriages can foster a whole oew set of problems, from where the adults and children spend the holidays to how to deal with new in-laws you hardly know.

Psychotherapists around the United States who collectively have treated thousands of clients for family "reunionitis" say, however, that there are a bost of approaches that can reduce if not eliminate the conflicts and ten-

The railway said 21 percent of its workers heeded a call to strike three bours in each eight-hour shift. The unions said 70 percent took part. Similar strikes were called for Dec. 23 and Jan. 8.

A railroad spokesman said the strike had little effect on passenger or freight trains, and no effect in the northeast regions of Catalonia and Aragon.

U.K. Suspends Some Paris Flights

LONDON (Reuters) - Britain's Civil Aviation Authority has suspended on safety grounds all Paris flights to and from the new City Airport near London's business center, the agency said Friday.

Christopher Tugendhat, the agency's chairman, notified Brymon Airways and Enrocity Express, the only airlines operating at the airport, that the Paris route was "provisionally suspended pending the outcome of an inquiry into the safety of such flights."

The action followed three near-collisions since the airport opened Oct. 26 and concern voiced by Brymon officials about insufficient air control over southeast England, Although two other routes, to and from Brussels and Plymouth, were not affected, Brymon later said it would also halt its Plymouth service for the time being.

Her election was an honor that had been denied such illustrious Frenchwomen as Madame de Staël Colette and others since the academy was founded 400 years ago.

In her comments on the election, Miss Yourcenar said she felt surrounded by "an invisible troupe of

When it was first published, he recalled, "it was immediately encrusted with the mixed and marmoreal honor of being called a classic in its own time."

The rest of her oeuvre, which drew on her familiarity with numerous tongues and hieratures, remained less widely known until she was named to the academy.

Her mother died when Marguerite was less than a month old, and she was educated, largely by tutors, under the direction of her father. By the age of 8 she was reading Racine, and as an adolescent had two small books of verse published. She became a classical scholar and later said her writing had "one foot in scholarship, the other in magic

By Wayne King New York Tunes Service WASHINGTON - One of the more unusual yuletide events in the capital is the arrival of John M. Snyder's Christmas card.

Mr. Snyder is chief lobbyist for the Citizens Committee for the Right in Keep and Bear Arms, an organization based in Washington. Guns are his pas-sion and his profession, and Mr. Snyder thinks Christmas is a wonderful time to put in a plug for them.

In Christmases past, his cards have carried such images as Santa Claus pointing a pistol at a burglar, Santa with a gift sack of revolvers and Santa firing a machine gun at a Soviet plane.

This year's card depicts a Ro-man Catholic priest shooting a lizard between the eyes with a pistol while two thugs cower in front of him. Inside, Mr. Snyder quotes from Matthew: Blessed harder stance. are the peacemakers.

The latest card is in aid of Mr. Snyder's campaign to have a 19th-century Italian priest, Father Gabriel Possenti, who is said to have performed a display of to nave performed a inspirat of marksmanship to deter bandits from looting his town, made a saint and declared "patron of handgunners." U.S. Congress Bars Politics As Grounds for Visa Denial

New York Tinue Service WASHINGTON - The Senate bas approved and sent legislation to President Ronald Reagan that temporarily prohibits the govern-ment from denying visas to foreigners because of their political beliefs.

The Kims Elect Roh

On With Democracy

South Korea's opposition fought a long brave fight for direct elections in order to have the chance to vote an unpopular gov-ermment out of power. Instead, because of its deep division, the opposition appears to have ianded victory to Roh Tae Woo, the ruling party's candidate, whose official anointment iast spring touched off national unrest.

Now opposition leaders charge fraud. If they have the evidence, let them produce it. If they don't, they can best serve democracy by adapting to the role of a democratic opposition. Meantime Mr. Roh, whose victory fell far short of a majority, needs in reach out, widely and quickly.

He is reported to have taken 36 percent of the vote, against 27 percent for Kim Young Sam and 26 for Kim Dae Jung. That translates into a majority for the opposition but a clear plurality for Mr. Roh. The alleged fraud would have to be widespread indeed to produce such decisive numbers. Thus far the Kims have not sustained their claims.

The opposition urgently needs to regroup if it hopes to rally for the coming congressional elections. Its constructive participa-tion is essential to carrying forward the democratic reforms begun at Mr. Roh's initiative after the popular upheaval last June. Attention now properly turns to the president-elect. He remains an enigma, responsible both for the ruling party's recent reforms and for many of its less savory deeds in the preceding seven and a half years. Which behavior offers the best guide to a Roh presidency? That question now preoccupies Koreans, and key allies like the United States. The Reagan administration has made clear America's interest in continued reform.

The sight of middle-class and middle-aged Koreans taking in the streets last spring alongside student protesters made a profound impression on Mr. Roh and those close to him. Their change of course has brought expanded political and labor freedoms that are likely in have lasting effects. If the president-elect will now build on these authentic, overdue reforms, he is well positioned to consolidate democratic change. His connections in the military and economic elites give him the necessary political space. Opposition pressures produced direct and, on present evidence, fair elections. But oppo-sition divisions ensured victory for Roh Tae

Woo. If he is prepared to heed the lessons of last June and the limitations of his plurality mandate, he can strongly serve democracy. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Evidence So Far

There is a question mark over the South Korean elections, but on the evidence so far, Roh Tae Woo, the ruling party's candidate, won a healthy plurality. He won playing by the opposition's rules: It had demanded a change from indirect to direct elections, and it got it. The air is thick with complaints of fraud, but the proof of fered so far is thin. Some in the opposition claim that the fraud was sufficient to invalidate the results. The more convincing explanation appears to be that the opposition lost because it split its vote among three other candidates, including the two Kims, whose combined vote did in fact exceed Mr. Roh's. Also, Mr. Roh ran a good campaign, presenting himself as a repentant former general who was now reliably committed to reform In this immediate post-election period, Koreans are "voting" a second time. This time the question is whether to accept the outcome of the balloting. Here it is useful to recall that the military-dominated ruling par-ty was forced to move last spring from indirect elections to direct because the country's dem, carried the day. There is the chance that the same impulse may keep the mixing class out of the streets now. These are people who prize the progress that South Korea has made in its development and crave a political result to match, but fear to invite disorder. Presumably, this group includes not only most of those who voted for Mr. Roh, but also, potentially, at least some portion of those who voted for the two Kims. The opposition, in its ambition and ardor, is working to keep the United States from accepting the election as fair and legitimate. It declares that American approval of a Roh victory will identify the United States with a repressive self-perpetuating military caste and sur the not-so-smoldering embers of anti-Americanism in Korea. But of course the United States cannot be intimidated by propaganda. If it determines that the election was reasonably fair, then it has good reason to say so --- and to suppose that Koreans will come to the same judgment themselves. - THE WASHINGTON POST

A Thumb in the Dike

What President Reagan once said in defense of his former deputy chief of staff wholly missed the point. Michael Deaver, he said, "never put the arm on me, or sought anything or any influence from me since he has been out of government." What Mr. Deaver did, with unseemly haste after leav-ing the White House in 1985, was to put the arm on the rest of the administration.

Exploiting his famed friendship with the Reagans, Mr. Deaver coerced and cajoled officials to make decisions sought by private clients, and collected astronomical ame under

What's This Talk About a Nuclear-Free World?

W ASHINGTON — Ask a stupid question, the old wheeze goes, and you get a stupid answer. So the answer should have come as no surprise when the Washington Post-ABC News Poll recently asked a scientifically selected sam-ple of 1,007 adult Americans: "Ultimately, do your think the Ilmited States and the Soviet Ilmion you think the United States and the Soviet Union you think the United States and the Soviet Union should or should not agree to eliminate all nucle-ar weapons?" A large majority of 68 percent said "should." Only 29 percent said "should not." A prudent 3 percent had "no opinion." Given the awful complexity of the issue, and the banality of the question (when is "ultimately"?), "no opinion" should have won hands down. But never mind; you can't fault the two-to-one major-ity in favor when not only Ronald Reagan but also Mikbai Gorbachev is holding out the nisin-the-Mikhail Gorbachev is holding out the pie-in-thesky of a world without nuclear weapons. Still less, when the top men are taiking that way, way the two world heavyweights talk, and why, Mr. Gorbachev's game is not hard to figure out. Leave aside whether he really thinks that such a state of grace could be verified, that nuclear technology could be dis-invented, that lesser potential nuclear powers could be trusted to comply. The general proposition of "denucle-arization" plays nicely to Soviet superiority in conventional forces and chemical weaponry in Europe, Mr. Gorbachev has nothing to loss.

In an earlier talk with television anchor-men, Mr. Reagan had reconstructed the break-down at Reykjavik in these words: "We had come to an agreement on literally total nuclear disarmament" when Mr. Gorbachey at the last moment brought up SDI, and "that's when I came home." He was not then asked why, if "literally total nuclear disarmancest" had been agreed to (as was But that is why Ronald Reagan has every reason not to talk in the same simplistic way, Why he does so has been puzzling me ever since put to him in our session: Was he not in danger of

He launched into a kong disquisition on the difference between conventional and nuclear war --between the traditional "niles of warfare" and "mutual assured destruction" with "missiles ex-ploding all over" America and the Soviet Union. Before he would agree to eliminate the "hundreds and hundreds" of shorter-range battlefield nuclear weapons in Europe that "equalize" Soviet conven-tional military superiority, the president said, con-ventional "parity" would have to be achieved. A Nice Start For Japan's New Leader

By Jim Hoagland

PARIS - Afflicted by the pangs of Nakasone withdrawal, the American press has not been paying much attention to the doings and sayings of the new Japanese prime minister, Noboru Takeshita. That is just as well from the standpoint of Mr. Takeshita, who likes to move quietly and methodically toward goals he can achieve.

"Yasu" Nakasone entranced American officials and puncits by looking and talking like a U.S. president rather than a Japanese politician. But by the end of his tenure in October, he had delivered more bombast and promises than change, and adulation had begun Mr. Takeshita is the opposite, phys-ically and temperamentally. He is as subdued in demeanor and conversa-tion as Mr. Nakasone is flamboyant, frequently causing foreigners and even his compatriots to underestimate him. The contrast was underscored this past week by his decision to make his symbolically important first visit abroad to Manila, subtly highlighting the growing economic importance of Japan's ties to the countries of Southeast Asia. Mr. Nakasone's maiden voyage was a high-profile political trip to South Korea that stirred conservafive opposition in Japan that dogged him throughout his term in office. Mr. Takeshita's conciliatory style and attention to substance may just fit the moment. It is a moment in which Japan must find ways to exercise quietly the enormous financial power it has accumulated in the past two years. Under Mr. Takeshita, Tokyo is likely to do so without chal-lenging Washington, but also without counting on American cooperation. For it is now clear to the rest of the world that the final year of Ronald Reagan's presidency will be a period of uncertainty and temporizing on the economic matters in Washington.

Already the dollar floats on un charted monetary seas like a wounded whale, with Treasury Secretary James Baker's harpoon dangling from its side. The interest rate increase needed to stabilize the greenback is ruled out by fear of provoking a recession, while the specter of renewed inflation cancels out other economic options for the United States.

Something for Bhopal

Union Carbide has admitted moral responsibility for the death of nearly 3,000 people and injury to perhaps 200,000 more, and denied it has any legal responsibility when compensation is discussed. A time must come when it can no longer hide behind such sophistry. It is three years since the gas disaster at the firm's plant at Bhopal and both parties - Union Carbide and the Indian government, acting on behalf of the victims — are just beginning what look set to be extraordinarily lengthy proceedings through the courts of India.

The decision by Judge M.W. Deo of the Bophal District Court to order the firm to distribute £170 million as an interim payment to victims within two months should be seen in this light. The payment is roughly 9 percent of the total £1.8 billion the Indian government has filed for. Judge Deo's rul-ing may have been bad in law [but it] displayed an uncommon fairness. [He] said that attempts at an overall settlement had become bogged down in the din of diverse and loud voices, leaving the wretched victims destitute and abandoned.

Neither India nor Union Carbide has much to be proud of in this affair. India's bureaucrats set the terms and drew up the restrictions on the plant. The American firm has drawn up a ramshackle list of excuses to hide its responsibility, blaming

About the INF Treaty

The ink has yet to dry on the INF accord signed by President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but already the agreement seems to have sparked a political revolt within the Western alliance. As the long road toward the treaty was traveled, it has frequently been acknowledged that some of its provisions contain military risks for the West, regardless of how much they may benefit Japan. But if peace is to be given a chance, such risks seem worth taking. It is imperative that all of us who support the Western alliance both here and abroad rally in the support of the U.S. president and his administration on this important issue. The world wants and needs the INF treaty.

wanted to be. He is a genuine tough guy, they were acting the part. Given the job of dealing with France's bostage and terrorial problems, he has made a trail of wreckage and outrage, but has delivered the goods. Two French former hostages in Beirut are free. The remaining three are thought likely to be freed before the presidential election takes place in France five months from now. Several people linked to the terrible Paris bombings of September and October 1986 have been jailed. The last important member of a domestic terror-ist group, Action Directe, has been caught. Corsican terrorists have been arrested. Basque terrorists operating from France into Spain are being rounded up and delivered to the mercies of the Spanish police.

Mr. Pasqua is the strongman of the French government. The prime minis-ter, Jacques Chirac, relies on him to deliver the presidency when that vote comes in the spring, Mr. Pasqua heads the Chirac campaign organization. There is, of course, a lot of broken and the intellectuals make of him. Voters on the right adore him. The left is a little frightened of him. He is the sort of some whice wakes you think that an accident might happen to you if you crossed him.

The solution of the hostage prob-lem began when the police, ignoring the Foreign Ministry, went after a functionary of the Iranian Embassy in Paris, ostensibly a translator but allegedly head of Iran's clandestine network in France — and, by the way, son of a former physician of Ayatollah Khomeini's. He fled to his embassy. The police surrounded it, flood-lit it, ostentanously checked cellars and sewers, interrogated those going in and out. The story was spread that this man was responsible for the 1986 bombings.

France now had a bostage of its own. The Iranians, predictably, then ac-cused a French diplomat in Tehran of spying and demanded that be be handed over. Behind the scenes there were comings and goings of Iranians, Lebanese, Algerians and Corsicans, Mr. Pasqua is a Corsican.

Hart Keeps Making the Same Mistake

N EW YORK - There is a com-mon thread connecting many strong people who decide to seek psychiatric counsel. It is the realization that they are acting repeatedly in a way harmful to them, without knowing quite why. So they spend time, often painful time, with somebody who can make them see themselves more clearly, discover what it is that makes them act out the same mistake - and by knowing, change. Sometimes they are aware of their behavior pattern before they see the psychiatrist. Often, the knowledge that they act repeatedly in the same harmful ways comes slowly as the psychiatrist performs his function of belging the patient know himself. There is a sadness about the Hart story. An obviously intelligent man, who has attracted other intelligent people to his cause, has not been strong enough to see himself plain and does not even seem to try very hard. So he keeps making the same mistake.

It is a refusal to see himself as responsible for himself and to say so at times of crisis or opportunity in his life. For that reason, his statement announcing his intention to resume his candidact for the presidency shows that he is still not qualified to be president. Can a nation really follow an individual so lacking in inner courage as to ignore or gloss over reality?

ments outside the dollar zone if present trends continue. This will gradually lead to an informal yen zone in Asia and a German mark zone in Europe. As economist Eliot Janeway pointed out earlier this year, Japan today uses the ven to finance exports as America once used the dollar.

Although often overlooked in the analyses of the great waves of change rolling over the world economy, Japan has become the world's most successful banker as well as manufacturing exporter. Five of the world's six largest banks in dollar terms are Japanese. And Japanese banks already own nearly 10 percent of all banking as-sets in the United States. Each time the yen rises. Japan's banks enlarge their capital base in terms of the rest of the world's currencies.

It is this set of circumstances that imparts significance to Mr. Takeshita's decision to go first to Manila and give pride of place to Southeast Asia - the heart of any future yen zone. He moved a pawn in that direction by unveiling the details of a $2 billion package of trade and aid for the region, and he sought to dispel the lingering bitterness there over Ja-pan's brutal World War II invasion with a gentle policy. It was a characteristic performance from a leader who moves almost imperceptibly, but steadily, toward well defined goals. It was a good start for the new kid on the leadership block.

By Blaine Harden Washington Post Service NAIROBI - Punctuating a week in which Kenya and Uganda have exchanged bullets, insults and allegations, President Daniel arap Moi of Kenya said Friday that Uganda was "preparing for war." Kenya ordered Uganda's ambassa-dor to leave the community dor to leave the country within 24

Mr. Moi's statement and the expulsion of Charles Katungi, the Ugandan ambassador, who was accused by Kenya of uttering an "in-credible insult on the person" of Mr. Moi, marked a historic low in relations between two East African nations that have a long common border and close economic ties.

Late Friday, Keuya recalled its ambassador and his deputy from Uganda.

Mr. Moi said Ugandan soldiers were digging trenches along the border and "preparing for war." ..."We have not done it," be said in a speech at a Kenyan university, "so let the world know, when we act, they should not blame us." The dispute has been fueled by Kenyan fears that the Libyan leader. Colonel Moammar Gadhafi, is using Uganda as a base for attempts to destabilize Mr. Moi's government

U.S. Beef? Japan Can't Stomach It

Computed by Our Staff From Dispatches

WASHINGTON - A key farm official from Japan's governing Liberal Democratic Party, pleading for more time to ease his country's barriers to agricultural imports, has asserted that because of health and religious reasons Japan may not be able to increase its purchases of American beef.

"To the intestinal system, it will mean a very big change" to eat more beef, Tsutomu Hata, a former agriculture minister, said at a luncheon Thursday, He said the Japanese had a "much, much larger" digestive system than Americans, which, he said, made it harder for them to cat beef.

"I've never heard that argument before," Clayton K. Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, said laughingly, "I've heard all the rest of them."

Mr. Hata, chairman of his party's Agricultural Committee, also cited Buddhist restrictions on meat as well as the traditional Japanese diet, which emphasizes fish.

Mr. Hata, a member of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's inner circle, made his comments during a steak luncheon given by the Congressional Beef Caucus as part of a campaign to get Japan to drop barriers to beef imports. He was challenged by Senator Phil Gramm,

A Manufactured Protein May Block AIDS Virus Procedure Works in Dish in Lab,

But Scientists Await Human Trials

By Gina Kolata New York Times Service NEW YORK - Scientists have developed a novel technique that. in theory at least, would use a cellular protein to block the AIDS virus from reaching the body cells that are its target. The technique is about to be testusts speculate. ed in animals and, if it continues to show promise, it could be tried in humans within a year.

While scientists said they were excited hy the development, they warned that even if tests are promising it would probably take years to develop a treatment for wide use by AIDS patients.

In addition, they cautioned that the protein had only been tested in the laboratory. They said that treatment of humans with it might turn out to have unacceptable side effects or that it might fail to provide protection when injected into the body.

The key to the new approach was the synthesis of a cellular protein that, in laboratory dishes, sops up the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome like a sponge. The synthesis was accom-plished with techniques of genetic manipulation.

In the body the protein, CD4, normally plays a crucial role in the spread of the AIDS virus from one cell of the immune system to anoth-er. The virus latches onto the protein on cell memhranes as the first step in invading the cells.

Scientists have discovered that in laboratory dishes, isolated bits of the protein attract the AIDS virus to themselves, preventing it from entering nearby cells.

They hope that when CD4 is administered to people infected with the AIDS virus, the protein might serve as a decoy, absorbing the virus and halting its spread to new cells. It also might be possible to attach virus-killing drugs to the protein in order to deliver the drugs directly to the AIDS virus, scien-

The exhibits, composed of paintings, sculpture, historical memorabilia and documents are extremely varied and everything in the museum illustrates either historically or artistically the close relationship between France and the United States over the past two centuries. Among the most moving souvenirs on display are a Ford ambulance used by the American Field Service during World War I and the order for D-Day dated June 6, 1944, signed by General Eisenhower. The museum also illustrates the rich cultural and artistic exchanges between the two countries, with exhibits from the many French artists drawn to America for inspiration as well as those American painters influenced by France.

Led by its dynamic curator Pierre Rosenberg, Blérancourt has exciting plans for development, including the expansion of the museum's art collection through the permanent loan of fifty paintings from the Louvre, the Musée d'Orsay and the Centre Georges Pompidou. This permanent exhibit will be housed in one of the pavilions renovated and expanded for the purpose. In the surrounding grounds, a botanical museum has also been created using American

Waldheim Affair, Economic Changes Create Turbulence

By Henry Tanner

- IENNA -- For a small country that cherishes coziness and likes 10 pre-tend that it is untouched by the world's tensions. Austria is having a decidedly turbulent time.

It is a country in flux on several fronts, the discomfort going behind the international fu-tor ov :r the continued tenure of President Kurt Waldheim

For the first time since it regained its inde-pendence in 1955, the national economic and social order is being radically transformed. The Austrian welfare state, once proudly hailed as a model for others, is being scaled down in an effort to reduce the towering public debt and make Austrian industries competitive before the European Community abolishes internal tariffs in 1992.

Full employment, once the cornerstone of the "Austrian model," has been scrapped, and aides to Chancellor Franz Vranitzky, a Social-ist, now speak of the need for a "cushion of unemployment," a phrase that old-school Austrian Socialists, remembering Bruno Kreisky, another Socialist chancellor, call heresy. The new catchwords are austerity and real-ism, as the center-left coalition, the product of last year's inconclusive election, stringgles to preserve what it can of the system of social benefits and labor peace created at the time of the economic miracle.

Even old age pensions are "no longer sacred cows," a government official says. State-owned heavy industries, the "unsinkable ships" of the Kreisky era, are being privatized, and some of those that are not viable are being closed down.

Other certainties also are vanishing. Mr. Kreisky's policy of "activist" neutrality, with controversial initiatives in the Middle East and Eastern Europe, has been quietly dropped. Mr. Vranitzky and Deputy Chancel-lor Alois Mock are calling for association with the European Community, possibly even full membership.

Such close ties with the West Europeans would not come easily to the neutral Austri-ans. "We dislike the Germans, look down on the Italians and find the Swiss boring," says Peter Michael Lingens, editorialist of profil, the leading Vienna weekly.

But neither the economic restructuring, which touches jobs and daily lives, nor the European issue, which will shape the country's future, are the subjects of the most heat-ed discussions either in public or in private.

The controversy surrounding Mr. Waldheim remains the central topic. Nearly two years after it started, "it keeps cropping up in every conversation, with friends and with strangers in pubs," a Socialist official and a rightist politician said in identical words. "It takes so much time, and it overshadows everything

"Ynu pretty much know what everybody thinks; when people get together, the two sides rush at each other like rugby teams wearing different-colored headbands," said annther Viennese.

The controversy has taken a new turn in recent weeks. Mr. Waldheim's isolation has deepened.

His chiel supporters in the People's Party are hurting politically. Mr. Mock, the party president, who had launched the Waldheim candidacy, is losing control of his party. The party secretary, Michael Graff, was forced to resign, against Mr. Mock's will, under pressure from provincial party leaders who found his latest anti-Semilic remark simply too much.

Even in the press, which had been aggres-

Dec. 5: Waning Support For Waldheim Signaled

The Vienna daily Die Presse reports that officials of the two ruling parties have begun soundings about a possible resignation of Mr. Waldheim. The report in the pro-Waldheim paper is seen as a signal of crosion in political support for Mr. Waldheim, Presidential officials rule out resignation.

chamois, the European mountain goat. This simplified image is more typical of the Austrians than the logos of other nations are for them. Under no circumstances would a French girl wear the red Jacobin cap of Marianne. No German nowadays would pull over his ears the nightcap that has graced the German Michi for centuries. No American would wear Uncle Sam's tophat and old-fashioned waistcoat.

But come the first warm days, millions of Austrians put on their national costume: colorful diradis for women; sturdy leather leder-hosen and the peaked hat with gamsbart for men. Goisern, a town in Austria's lake area, even has an annual gamsbart competition. The triumphal advance of blue jeans, washed at least once a week, has not really

For the first time, there has been serious talk that the president may be forced to resign, even though this remains unlikely. Die Presse, Vienna's one serious daily and long a consistent defender of the president, reported that discreet talks to this effect took place between the two coalition parties.

Thomas Chorherr, the paper's editor, who as late as last July took most of a full page to blame Austria's troubles on the foreign press, now says that Mr. Waldheim's voluntary resignation might be a good thing for the country but is not in the cards.

Public opinion also has been evolving. "Jetzt erst recht" ("Now more than ever") was the slogan that the managers of the Waldheim campaign tacked on to his posters when the charges of the World Jewish Congress first broke. The truculent message summed up the nation's mood at the time.

Today, the holes in this national solidarity are widening, judging from the number of critical letters to newspapers and other indications. The national mood changed noticeably after the summer holidays, "when every second Austrian returned from Italy and elsewhere appalled by what people are saying about his country." a politician reports.

A leading editor last week ventured the guess that public opinion now is about evenly divided and that a plebiscite about the president could go either way. The question is not entirely aca-

One, called "Essay on Austria" by Josef Haslinger, includes an incisive analysis of the part of Mr. Waldheim's strategy that many Austrians feel inflicted the deepest and most lasting damage on the nation - namely, his repeated assertions that "like hundreds of thousands of other Austrians, I did nothing but my duty as a soldier."

This, Mr. Haslinger argues, was a cruel hoax as well as blackmail. It misrepresented the charges against the president by twisting them into an accusation against all Austrians who had served in the German Wehrmacht, The result, Mr. Haslinger says, was a forced unreal solidarity wrung from every citi-zen who had to fear that if Mr. Waldheim could be accused for doing his duty, so could he.

The growing impression that they have been "hijacked inm Mr. Waldheim's own personal scheme of guilt by association," as one Viennese writer put it, is one of the reasons why an increasing number of Austrians feel mounting resentment against their presiden

Some long-standing taboos and ali-bis have been eroded if not removed in the course of the national debate. One of these taboos is anti-Semitism and the discussion of anti-Semitism.

There have been opinion polls and investigations by newspapers that registered the rise in anti-Semitism in the wake of the charges by the World Jewish Congress.

When the weekly Wochenpresse denied the existence of renewed anti-Semitism, its rival, profil, offered proof to the contrary by printing a full page of crudely anti-Semitic imprecations that had been phoned in in the switchboard of Austrian television after a program on "Jewish-Christian reconciliation." Cardinal Franz Koenig, one of the most respected Austrians, spoke up to depinre the re-emergence of anti-Semitism and appeal to Austrian Catholics to re-dedicate themselves to the spirit of tolerance.

In a remarkably frank speech, the cardinal also said that leading Austrian prelates, including his predecessor as archbishop of Vienna, Cardinal Theodor Innitzer, had welcomed Hitler and later regretted their error.

Cardinal Koenig, who stepped down as archbishop of the capital two years ago at the mandatory age of 80, remains a powerful moral force in the country. He has long been an exponent of liberalism in the church, in contrast to his successor, Mansignor Hans Hermann Groer, a conservative.

Liberal Catholic laymen, who have been in despair at the failure of the church hierarchy to act as a voice of moderation in the national debate, assert that the lack of official church leadership prompted Cardinal Koenig to speak up and set a personal example of candor for Austrian Catholics. The cardinal's Vienna office has been swamped with requests for copies of the speech.

The next step in the drama will come with the report of the international commission of historians who have been appointed by the government to investigate the charges against Mr. Waldbeim. The report is due in January or February.

Mr. Mock has tried, but failed, to convince the commission to confine itself to the narrow question of criminal guilt. This would have made it possible to proclaim the vindication of Mr. Waldheim if, as is likely, the historians failed to come up with a war criminal's "smoking gun."

Instead, the commission has made it clear that it will look also into the broader question of what Mr. Waldheim knew - and concealed. On those grounds, the president is thought to be more vulnerable.

small library with analyses of the Austrian character.

The manikin with the leather pants and the funny hat is not a German. That much seems to be abvious to the mass of Austrians, with the exception of a few Nazis and Greater Germans and a small lunatic fringe of the skinhead type. It took Hitler, the common experience of concentration camps and the privations of World War II to make Austrians aware that they could be a nation of their own.

Through their East European-related history, they developed into a nation apart, despite common language and culture with their German big brother, whom a majority of Austrians had received with so much enthusiasm in March 1938.

In May 1945, the Austrians quickly forgot the romantic ties that had bound them to Greater Germany. The stampede to get away from them angered, and still angers, some Germans, and the bitter statement that "the Austrians' greatest achievement was to make the world believe that Hitler was a German and Beethoven an Austrian" is not wholly undeserved.

But creeping quietly out of the history of the Nazi years was not a total success. Too much had to be swept under the carpet and too much did not fit the picture of the Austrians as the "first victims of Nazi aggression." There were the photographs of thousands of Austrians enthusiastically greeting Hitler "the liberator" and other pictures of pleased-looking Austrians watching Jews clean pavements.

This darker side of the sybaritic, singing and dancing Austrian has found an early expression in the two truly Austrian styles - 18thcentury baroque and turn-of-the-century Jundstil. The theatrical, whipped-cream-andcurticue baroque also delights in skulls and uther paraphernalia of death. And the morbid side of Austria's Jugendstil, the deadly sweetness of an overripe culture, has been discov-ered by the world at large in recent years, possibly because the "death-in-life" tradition seems now less absurdly and locally Austrian to Western nations used to dancing on the auclear volcann.

The basic insecurity, the anticipation of inescapable disaster, makes the attending marvels of life so much sweeter; the turbulent madness of the waitz, the temptation of the fresh Austrian wines and the consolation of music. They are much more important to Austrians than to many other nations.

Dancing is a way of life in Austria, from the Vienna social season with about 800 balls (including dances for the bakers, the plumbers and those of individual Vienna districts), to regular dances on the village green on Kirtag, the day of the saint to whom the village church is dedicated

Austrians dance at country weddings, they dance into the new year to the sound of "The Blue Danube Waltz," and they dance into old age in booked-up dancing classes for senior citizens.

Austrians, when criticized as a nation, have often pointed to the fact that "After all, we've had Mozart and Beethoven," as if this were a merit not to be clouded by small weaknesses.

What makes Austria a country where music seems ever-present are the thousands of village, fire brigade and railroad workers' brass bands, and the small town, trade union and church choirs, where hard-working citizens spend their free time laboring into the night in order to be able to play a marching tune without a false note nr sing an ancient fugue for four to six voices,

All of Austria was up in arms when an American television report in the 1960s painted the Austrians as a bunch of whipped-cream eaters who leaned on their shovels like workers' monuments instead of charging ahead into modern times.

In the meantime, Austrians have learned to live with their image as gluttons. They have successfully resisted nouvelle cuisine, have never forsaken their dumplings, roast pork, Hungarian-style gulyas and heavy sweets, and die of heart disease from overweight more often than from liver complaints, which speaks for the quality of the light Austrian wines and not for the nation's abstinence.

So who are the Austrians? Even National Day does not produce a heroic profile before a background of cracking flags. The choice of date gives rise to doubt: In polls, a majority insists that Oct. 26 was chosen because "that was the day in 1955 when the last Russian soldier left the country." Wrong, ft was the day when the Austrian parliament unanimously accepted "everlasting neutrality."

The celebrations traditionally consist of a hike. People assemble around 9 A.M., and the federal president wishes a happy holiday over the radio and sends the marchers off, Chatting, munching sandwiches and trying to untangle dogs' leashes and pram wheels, rows upon rows nf citizens wind through the Vienna Woods, the Salzburg hills or up the steep slopes of Innsbruck. At the end, every finisher receives a pin, confirming that he walked six miles (10 lometers).

This peaceful, friendly event hides a deep uncertainty about the past: What should Austria celebrate?

Its Nazi and war past? That has been declared unhistory, The Austrian-Fascist days of 1934 to 1938? God forbid. The good old enperor? Republican Austria knows that the empire was not exclusively Empress Sissy and dancing countesses...

What can be celebrated is a perfect understatement: a small nation in a small country groping its way toward self-sufficiency and self-made neutrality and hoping for a place, not in Greater Germany, but in Greater Esrope.

East or West? Debate Renews on Approach To EC Membership

By Dennison Rusinow

IENNA -- Intimately bound to the West by sentiment, ideology and in-stitutions, geographically vulnerable and historically linked to the East, and constitutionally obligated to permanent neutrality, the Austrians sometimes feel lonely and insecure. Today, these sentiments have a highly practical and primarily economic focus.

After several years on the back burner of public consciousness and the political agenda, Austria's relationship to the European Com-Umunity is again a hotly debated issue, Some who favor closer links or full membership are defining it as a critical choice "between isola-tion and integration."

The question has been reopened by an increasing awareness of the economic costs and personal inconveniences of nonmembership, and by concern that these will increase substantially as the EC moves toward the unified internal market" that its members are pledged to achieve by 1992.

The answer of most Austrian decisionmakers used to be that Austrian membership in the looser European Free Trade Association (EFTA) and Vienna's 1972 free trade agreement with the EC were as much as the economy needed and all that a strict interpretation of Austria's "permanent neutrality on the Swiss model" would allow.

This has changed since the Socialist Party and the conservative People's Party formed a "grand coalition" under Chancellor Franz Vraniuzky, a Socialist, last January, and the pace of change has accelerated in the past two months.

"Austria wants to participate fully and com-prehensively in the internal market," is how Manfred Scheich, who heads the Foreign Ministry's department for international economic relations, summarizes the government's posi-tion. Six weeks ago, Mr. Scheich, who also directs an interministerial "working group for European integration," created last February, could also tell a visiting reporter that full membership in the EC "is not a government policy.

Critics have been saying that the EC is bound to reject participation without membership as an unacceptable Viennese attempt "to pick the raisins out of the cake," the Austrian phrase for attempting to have one's cake and eat it too. In response, government officials emphasized that theirs is a "global approach" in which they are prepared to swallow the whole internal market concept, including unappetizing parts like contributions for the community's less-developed regions and its costly Common Agricultural Policy.

In evidence of their earnestness, they cite a new rule that all relevant draft legislation must include a clause describing its compatibility with existing EC norms. Steps to bring Austrian product standards into conformity with EC standards are also said to be in advance of those of other EFTA and some EC members. (The EFTA groups Austria, Finland, Iceland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.)

Now, the government's position, reviewed at a cabinet meeting on Dec. 1 and confirmed in two subsequent statements by Foreign Minister Alois Mock, seems to have taken another step: EC membership "is not excluded" and would be compatible with neutrality as presently construed.

For some Austrian commentators, this Viennese hesitation waltz with the EC is evidence that the coalition still does not know or is divided about what it really wants. For others, it is a sensible (or devious) strategy to prepare business and public opinion for future membership. Also, negotiations that do not have membership as their declared aim are considered easier for both partners.

Mr. Mock may have had the second inter-pretation in mind when be told a gathering of experts on Dec. 3: "Today, we can observe a dynamism and enthusiasm for integration that was unimaginable two years ago."

Another reason for the hesitation is a question that has hovered over Austrian foreign relations since 1955: What kinds of international economic or other associations and commitments are compatible with the country's "permanent neutrality," and in whose eyes? In 1955, the Austrian parliament adopted a constitutional law pledging "permanent autopted a con-ity" as a voluntary quid pro quo for the state treaty that had just restored the country's full sovereignty after 10 postwar years of four--power Allied occupation.

Austrian governments have consistently defined their version of neutrality, which they call "active," far more broadly than their Swiss neighbors. They joined and have played an active role in the United Nations, and tend to speak up loudly on far-flung international is-

IKE THE comforting presence of 1,300 international ovil servants in the towers of Vienna's "UN city," these activities are regarded as a little reinsurance, through high visibility, that neutrality will be respected despite Austria's small size and defenseless position between the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-

Whether joining the EC would also be compatible with permanent neutrality is open to challenge because the EC aspires to political (and someday perhaps military) as well as conomic integration. At least this is what the Soviet Union, claiming a right to object as a signatory of the 1955 state treaty, has previously reminded the Austrians whenever they thought about it. Austrians who believe in a special East-West bridging role for a strictly neutral Austria, or who lear that their businesses or jobs may be endangered in a larger, more competitive European market, have tended to agree. So Austria has remained in the EFTA while other members defected to the EC, and the EFTA has shrunk to a six-member Nordic and Alpine club.

There are several reasons why the EC question is again active and houter than before. The relative isolation of Austria's economic poli-cies and market, which has allowed small-scale or inefficient enterprises and the Austrians anti-competitive business ethos to cojoy great-er protection than would be possible within the EC, may once have had virtues. But this is no longer true. The country's troubled and overprotected economy badly needs restructuring, modernization and greater cost-efficiency. Many Austrians feel that only full integration in a larger market will provide the necessary means and goals for real competition. They believe that new technologies and foreign investments will come to Austria only if the products are certain of nondiscriminatory access to a larger market.

The costs of outsider status are already large. A survey of retail prices for a broad range of consumer durables by the Austrian Chamber of Labor in December 1986 found that these were on average 24.16 percent higher in Vienna than in Munich. The EC is pledged to eliminate the remaining mountain of nontariff barriers and other obstacles to free movement for labor, capital, goods and services and to bring about a unified internal market among its 12 members by 1992. Even if this is only partly achieved, as most are predicting, movement in this direction will certainly multiply the penalties of nonparticipation for Austra's small economy and small population of 7.5 million, which is heavily dependent for its livelihood on trade with the EC.

Thomas Oliva, an expert on Austrian consumer industries, summarized the consequences: "The price for being different is getung too high, and people are voting with their feet." They are doing so by buying and invest-ing beyond Austria's borders, which are only a short drive from almost anywhere in the coun-

Eastern Austrians shop in Hungary, contrib-uting to the special relationship that has been developing between Vienna and Budapest.

Western Austrians head for West Germany or Italy, which explains why western Austrian business and political leaders tend to be leading advocates of EC membership.

Key groups like the Socialist Party and the Federal Economic Chamber, formerly reluctant to consider closer EC links or membership, have apparently been coming to the same conclusion. On Dec. 9, the economic chamber, a powerful "social partner" in the Austrian system and traditional defender of small businesses fearful of bigger markets and competition, was asked to approve a "position on European integration," which bluntly states that "membership is ... the goal for Austria."

Pro-EC Austrians also note that other members of the EFTA are considering Common Market membership, or have less compelling reasons than Austria to do so, such as Switzer-land, Sweden and Finland, because companies domiciled in the EC but owned by their nationals already give them insider access to the internal market where it is needed.

In the context of Moscow's new look in economic and foreign policy and the Soviet bloc's own overtures to the EC to establish links with COCOM, Moscow's failure to disapprove the idea - as yet - encourages suspicions that it would not oppose an Austrian application for EC membership. Some observers believe that the EC and Austria are readier for each other than ever before because expanding EC-EFTA trade is more important to both groups — the EFTA is already the biggest buyer of EC exports — in a period when alternative export markets are shrinking or stagnating.

Two major impediments remain. The EC has displayed a clear preference for a global approach with all EFTA countries, but these are pursuing widely divergent strategies and aims. Although unwilling to take a clear posi-tion until Austria has made a formal approach, EC officials are signaling that integration in the internal market without membership is probably unacceptable.

Although the EC is unwilling to take a position until Austria bas made a formal approach, the community is still busy digesting its newest members, Spain and Portugal, and is displaying no eagerness to take on more.

Economy in Transition

Industry Takes the Painful Pill of Privatization and Restructuring

By Ferdinand Protzman

IENNA - Over the years, resisting change has become something of an Austrian hallmark, one raised nearly to an art form by practitioners such as Metternich and Kaiser Franz Josef.

Franz Josef earned special distinction in foot-dragging by refusing for years to allow installation of electricity or telephones in his Hofburg Palace in Vienna. For Metternich, change was just intrinsically bad, the sort of thing promoted by upstarts like Napoleon.

Those stalwarts of the status quo would undoubtedly frown on the transformation of product has been speot on research and development, a much lower figure than in the United States or West Germany. The estimate for 1990 is still only 1.5 percent of GDP, coming in roughly equal parts from the state and private industry.

The urgency for adopting a more gener-ous approach was underlined by two events this year: Austria's decision to go ahead with full membership in the European Space Agency (ESA), and the country's agreement to participate in 16 (out of 165) projects launched by EUREKA, the Euro-

IENNA - Almost without knowing bow it happened, Aus-tria has found itself thrust into the Austria's economy currently under way. Chan-cellor Franz Vranitzky's coalitioo government is privatizing large chunks of the sprawling and often uoprofitable state-owned heavy industry, restructuring much of what remains and cautiously pruning the nation's comprehensive social net.

Unlike the Austrian historical figures mentioned above, Mr. Vranitzky, a member of the Socialist Party, is not a stonewaller. The government unveiled a package of budget-reduction measures in September that drew heavy criticism from many rank-and-file Socialists. as well as from former Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, the party's senior figure. Despite the clamor, Mr. Vranitzky did not flinch.

"We are not going to jump back from this," he said. "Rather, we are going to push ahead with what has been announced

He has lived up to his words. Despite the current turmoil in the global financial markets, the government has not changed its timetable for privatization. It has already successfully kicked off the campaign with the sale of shares in its profitable oil company.

A capital increase at Oesterreichische Länderbank AG, the nation's second largest bank, is under way. The government, which holds 60 percent of the bank's equity, will not participate, in effect allowing its stake to drop to the legal maximum, 51 percent, by letting the public buy the new shares.

In 1988, the government will also reduce its nation's industrial production, the economy stake in Creditanstalt-Bankverein AG to 51 faces serious trouble. percent from 60 percent. Interests in Austrian Airlines, the national flag-carrier, and the state-owned electric utility company will be listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange. The state-owned steel company will also undergo restructuring.

The economic transition, economists and government officials said, is painful, promising and unavoidable. The bottom line, they said, is that much of Austria's state-owned industry has no viable alternative to radical surgery if it is going to survive and compete on an international scale. And without changes in the state sector, which accounts for 20 percent of the

It is already having problems. In the first six months of 1987, Austria's gross domestic product grew a scant 0.6 percent from the yearearlier period. For the full year, Georg Busch, an economist with the Oesterreichische Institut für Wirtschaftsforschung (Austrian Economic Research Institute) in Vienna, projects that GDP, which measures a oation's total output of goods and services, will grow between 0.5 and 1 percent, down from 1.7 percent growth in 1986.

Because of beavy losses in the state sector, Austria's budget deficit swelled to 106.7 billion schillings (about $9,287 billioo) in 1986, and is expected to be much higher this year. While deficits were tolerated as the price of full employment, which Austria enjoyed under Mr. Kreisky's tenure in the 1970s, they began to grow out of cootrol in the 1980s.

Now the government is counting on revenue from its privatization package to raise about 16 billion schillings, helping to push the budget deficit down to around 70 billion schillings in 1988. Spending cuts and tax reforms will pro-vide the remainder of the savings in the 1988 budget.

The pain is fell mainly by employees in the state industrial sector. In a oation where just a few years ago unemployment was virtually nooexistent, the loss of jobs and layoffs from restructuring have hit hard, pushing the mem-ployment rate up to a seasonally adjusted 5.7 percent of the work force in the third quarter of this year.

Crowds of angry workers have repeatedly protested plant closings in front of the Chan-cellery on Vienna's Ballhausplatz. But the government has oot sugar-coated the social dislocations caused by the economic restructuring.

"Nineteen-eighty-eight will be a terrible year," said Hugo Michael Sekyra, the general director of Oesterreichische Industrieverwalnmg AG (OIAG), the holding company for the state industries, referring to the sweeping over-haul of Voest-Alpine AG, the state-owned steel CORCETE

OIAG controls 200 companies and about 96,000 workers. It posted a loss of 10.2 billion schillings in 1986 and expects losses of 7 billion to 8 billion this year. Since 1980, the govern-ment has pumped 31 billion schillings into the holding company.

But the changes also carry the promise of a leaner, more competitive, more market-oriented economy.

In October, the government said it would streamline Voest into separate profit centers, while at the same time slashing production and the oumber of workers. Voest is the natioo's largest conglomerate, producing 95 percent of Austria's steel output.

In many ways, Voest is a case study of the problems in the state sector. It was formed in 1973, when the government merged the profitable Voest steel works in Linz with the Alpine works at Donawitz, which was deeply mired in losses. Rather than evolving into a profitable giant, the losses spread like a cancer,

The fusion made no sense economically." said Wilfried Heinemann, director of the steel division at OIAG. "We learned that bigger is not occessarily better. We should have adapted to market conditions much sooner."

"The state industries got into trouble because they operate in basic goods, like steel" said Mr. Busch. "These industries have problems everywhere because of fierce competition from low labor-cost countries like Korea and Taiwan. At the same time, however, the service sector has flourished and there is considerable potential there."

Heavy losses in the state sector have swollen the budget deficit.

The problems of the state sector are really a political issue as much as an economic one," Mr. Busch added. "Conservatives say do away with nationalization altogether. Let's go private. The state is a bad entrepreneur. The Socialists still see value in the state taking the lead in realizing macroeconomic goals."

ESPITE the debate on the merits of privatization, and the global stock market crash in late October, the government has pressed abead. But sniping, primarily from within the Socialist ranks, has cootinued, even as the first compaoy, Oesterreichische Mineralöl Verwaltung AG, the profitable oil company that has Aistria's only crude oil refinery, was brought to the bourse in mid-November,

"To be hooest, I thought the government should have delayed the OMV sale because of. the stock market crash," said a Viennese banker, who asked not to be identified. "Given the importance it held for the remainder of the privatization, the historical reluctance of Austrians to buy equities and the panic atmo-sphere in the global stock markets, the timing cemed very bad." Bolstered by an advertising campaign, a 40 percent reduction in volume and a per-share price lowered to 4,400 schillings from 5,000 schillings, the sale turned out to be a triumph for the government. It was closed after just three days, oversubscribed by 200 percent. Surprisingly, domestic investors were the primary buyers. Because of the altered conditions, however, it brought in less mooey than expected.

But observers said the main point was that the sale showed the government could teat quickly and decisively to sudden changes in market conditions, which is dominated these days by the same inventions, telephones and electricity, that Kaiser Franz Josef resisted.

FERDINAND PROTZMAN, a staff corre-spondent of the International Herald Tribune, is based in Frankfurt.

Space communications is another niche in which Austria bas found a firm foothold, iocluding the Eurolaser project within EU-REKA. As far as earth-based communications are coocerned, Austria already has one of the most advanced data-transmission networks anywhere in Europe, and a piloi test for the iotroduction of ISDN (the integrated Services Digital Network) is to be started in 1988. For this, four firms that otherwise compete on the market - Alcatel. Kapsch, Schrack and Siemens - have formed a joint development company, OFEG, with the Austrian PTT.

Researchers Stake Out Claim in World Technology

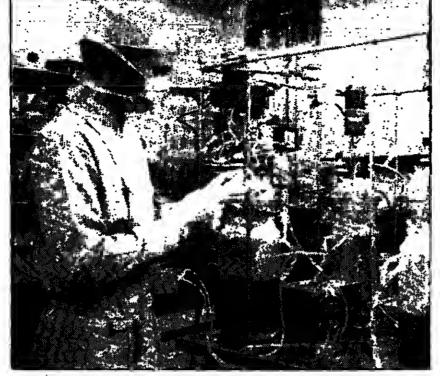

Nooe of these achievements would be possible without broad-based support from the country's technical universities, particularly those io Vienna and Graz.

A cluster of firms in and around Graz all conceptrating on telecommunications and micro-electronics, including the production by AMS of customized chips, provide chances for lurning the south of the province of Styria into a sort of miniature Silicon Valley.

The giant Austrian steel and engineering cooglomerate Voest-Alpine has respooded by changing its product line accordingly. One of its biggest recent successes bas been the development (together with Honeywell Bull) of a computer software protectioo method known as SOFT SEAL, which eliminates the possibility of producing pirated copies of expensively produced programs.

The western province of Tirol, better known for its mountain resorts, also has a striking high technology reputation. Me-tallwerk Plansee, which has been a world leader in powder-metallurgy since the 1960s, has oow started introducing advanced technologies into its productioo line. Plansee is switching its long-standing reliance on semi-finished products in cemented carbides ("hard metals") to fully fabricated parts, such as X-ray tubes.

Also operating in Tirol is Biochemie, whose researchers developed the first oral peoicillio, marketed under the oame Ospen. More recently, the company has become known for its industrial-scale production of Interferon using biotechnological processes.

Worldwide attentioo was attracted earlier this year by the Lower Austrian company Immuno, which announced an advance io the fight against Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, Immuno, which has been producing a variety of vaccines since the 1950s, said it had now developed a proto-type vaccine antigene, GP 160, which causes the formation of an obodies resulting in neutralization of the AIDS virus in vitro.

Immuno is also among the Austrian companies engaged in the EUREKA pro-ject for research into biotechnological mass-cell cultures.

Discoveries have continued to this day. One of the most beautiful shapes in European metalwork is that of a pewter flagon, or covered jug found in Medway basin near Tonbridge Casile. Anthony North, a researcher in the metalwork department in the V&A, notes that pieces of the form, considered to date from the first half of the 14th century, could have been made either io the Low Countries or in England. A delightful little spice plate was recovered from a well at Tong Castle in Shropshire as recently as 1978.

With so few pieces in hand, no clear cut picture of English metal-working art emerges. Each one of-ten is a niddle in itself, like the wonderful copper alloy holy water stoup. Were it oot for an invocation cast in low relief naming a member of the old Glanville family in East Anglia, its very English identity might be in doubt. The flaring shape, widening abruptly near the top and with a vertical rim, like certain mortars throughout Europe, rests on three short legs of very Germanic appearance. Three figural panels deepen the mystery of the piece.

Born 100 years ago, Jeanneret, better known as Le Corbusier, died to 1965 while taking a swim off Cap Martin in southern France at the age of 78. The contennial of his birth has been the occasioo for a number of exhibitions, the latest of which is the exhaustive one currently filling the top floor of the Pompidou Center.

The show, which runs through Jan. 3, is almost overpowering and makes room for every aspect of the man's enormous activity, presenting a superabundance of plans, models, letters, books and many rather pretentiously unsatisfactory paintings and sculptures.

Born in La Chaux-de-Fonds, Switzerland, Le Corbusier worked in Paris in 1908-9 as an apprentice under Auguste Perret, who was then doing innovative work to reinforced concrete. He went to Berlin in 1910 and made friends with Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and Walter Gropius. He moved on to Hellerau Cropius. He moved on to frenerau near Dresden (1911-12), taking an interest in the work being done in industrial standardization by the industrial standardization by the Deutscher Werkbund. ECONOMIC SCENE Steadying Markets No Sign That World Crisis Is Over

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

New York Timer Service EW YORK — Although the securities markets have steadied in recent weeks, there are plenty of signs that the danger to the international economy is anything but over. The dollar is cootinuing to fall. The Third aftermath of a flimsy price and production agreement by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, have plunged below $16 a barrel — good news to consumers and financial markets, but alarming to producers from Indonesia to Texas. markets, but alarming to producers from Indonesia to Texas,

Thirty-three economists from 13 countries, assembled by the Institute for International Economics in Washington, have issued a warning that there is still "something seriously wrong with the world economy." Two finannot taken promptly and in adequate degree, the economists caution, "a third crash of the markets could be greater than either predecessor — with far more pervasive results."

Is the world suffering from one economic disease or many? The group, which includes two Nobel laureates, Lawrence Klein of the University of Pennsylvania and Franco Modigliani of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, concludes that the world is suffering from "many major and unsustainable imbalances, which take different form in different parts of the world," These include the budget and trade deficits of the United States; the external surpluses of Japan, Europe and the newly industrialized producers of Asia; high unemployment in Europe, and the indebtedness and stagnatioo in the developing countries. The cure, they say, "must begin in the United States, whose twin deficits lie at the heart of the matter." Restoring balance in America's external position, the study says, will require eliminat-ing both the present current-account deficit, which is more than $150 billion, and offsetting the costs of the United States" becoming the world's largest debtor, with annual servicing charges of about $50 billion.

ONVERSELY, Japan, West Germany and other countries will have to see their external surpluses shrink by $150 billion to $200 billion, a shift their export industries will find it hard to tolcrate. The study estimates that Japan's surplus will have to drop by $70 billion to $100 billion. Three leading Japanese economists, Isamu Miyazaki, chairman of Daiwa Securities Research Institute; Saburo Okita, a former minister of foreign affairs, and Masaru Yoshitomi, director general of the Economic Research Institute of the Economic Planning Agency. signed the statement.

In addition, West Germany and other European countries will have to cut their annual external surpluses by $50 billion to $70 billion, and the Asian producers, by about $30 billion. The Asian and European countries with surpluses will have to ease the pain of sbrinking export markets by expanding their domestic economies faster. The study found that Japan "is off to a very good start," but is critical of others.

For the United States, the adjustment process is likely to mean, at best, very slow growth in living standards. According to the study, the rate of growth in domestic demand will have to be cut

Finance Chief Out In Brazil

Bresser Pereira, Angered, Resigns

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches BRASILIA - Finance Minister Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira, the conomic policy chief for the world's most indebted developing nation, resigned Friday after fail-ing to persuade President José Sarney to cut government spending and raise taxes for the wealthy.

A spokesman confirmed the resignation of the former professor of economics. He had been to the post less than eight months. No successor was named. Like his predecessors, Mr.

Bresser Pereira, Brazil's third fi-nance minister io its 34 mooths of democratic rule, could oot produce the formula needed to ease the bur-den of its $113 billion foreign debt. Only the United States is more heavily indebted. The resignation had been widely expected. Mr. Bresser Pereira had sought in vaio for several weeks to persuade Mr. Samey to order an economic plan featuring big spending cuts and progressive taxation of interest and dividends on capital investments.

Mr. Bresser Pereira's goal was to trim the budget deficit, estimated by the government at 5 percent of gross national product and at 7 percent by private economists, to 3.5 percent of GNP.

The International Mooctary Fund had indicated that, if this could be achieved, it would be more willing to increase its loans to Brazil. This in turn would have encouraged commercial banks, alienated from Brazil for much of this year for its refusal to meet interest payments.

The banks signed an agreement Tuesday lending Brazil an addi-tional $3 billion until June.

Mr. Bresser Pereira, 53, became finance minister on April 29, when Dilson Funaro resigned after the collapse of a price-freeze program aimed at controlling Brazil's tripledigit inflation, now put at 350 per-

Cigarette Maker Uses Journal to Send a Message on Ads

By Richard W. Stevenson New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Pravia does not carry cigarette ads. But last month it became a vehicle for the largest U.S. tobacco company, Philip Morris Cos. Philip Morris, the maker of Mariboro, Virginia Slims and other brands, mailed copies of the Soviet newspaper to several hundred news editors and other media executives across the United States. Enclosed was a letter from Guy L. Smith 4th, the company's vice president for corporate affairs.

"Pravda does not carry cigarette advertising, or indeed any advertising," he wrote. "Government control of information is typical of totalitarian regimes and dictatorships." Mr. Smith went on to note that legislation is pending in Congress that would ban all advertising and promotion of tobacco. "Those who favor such a ban hope to control the behavior of Americans by limiting their access to information," he said, Philip Morris knew the mailing would attract criticism but saw it as an effective means of raising the issue, Mr. Smith said. "I don't think it's heavy-handed," he said. "Pravda represents censorship and idea control. Ad bans represent censorship and idea control."

The campaign certainly attracted the attention of Representative Mike Synar, the Oklahoma Democrat who is the sponsor of a bill to ban all tobacco

The provocative mailing was but the latest lobbying effort in the high-stakes bartle over whether all U.S. advertising for tobacco products should be restricted or eliminated. Tobacco companies spend more than $2 billion each year on advertising and other promotions, all of which would be barred by the proposed legislation.

the proposed legislation. In lobbying against an ad ban, the tobacco com-panies have vociferous allies among newspaper and magazine publishers, ad agencies and civil libertar-ians. They argue that a prohibition would violate the right to free expression and that no rationale exists for banning advertising for a legal product. Cigarette ads have been barred from U.S. televi-tion would reduce the parted from U.S. televi-

At that time, cigarette sales were declining because the Federal Communications Commission, under its fairness doctrine to promote opposing viewpoints, had ordered broadcasters in the 1960s to run anti-smoking public service messages to counter the cigarette commercials. As a result, the tobacco companies could only stop the anti-smoking mes-sages by getting their own ads off the air. Ban proponents argue that tobacco products

World Cocoa Surplus Keeps Chocolate Makers Sweet

1.ONDON - Chocolate makers are enjoying a bumper year as low

Cocca prices bring higher profits and sales. Trade analysis also see signs this Christmas that the solid chocolate bar may be making a comeback, after a period when cereal-filled bars took more of the market. But for cash-pinched Third World producers of cocoa beans, the analysis added, demand is not likely to rise enough to erase the surplus that helped send prices plunging earlier this month to fiveyear lows.

British chocolate sales are up 3 to 4 percent from 1986 levels because manufacturers have been able to avoid retail price rises. Chocolate seems a better value, so people are starting to eat more of it, industry sources said.

"We are seeing real growth because there have been no price rises, and none is likely in the next 12 months with the cost of cocca still low," one analyst said. With coccoa prices expected to remain under pressure, prospects also took bright for manufacturers in 1988, said John Elston, an analyst with the stockbrokerage James Capel. Demand is not growing fast enough to erase the surplus. Unless bad weather hits more than one major growing region, analysts said, another surplus is expected for 1988.

Most of the world's cocca used to be grown either in West Africa or Latin America, with Brazil and the Ivory Coast still the world's biggest producers. But now, with Malaysia the world's fourth largest producer and output in Indonesia also rising, chances of bad weather hitting crops in three different areas of the world in one season seem

Wales' Little Woosnam Has Had a Big Golfing Season Like No Other

OSWESTRY, England — lan Woosnam is golf's little hig man. Standing 5 feet 4½ inches (1.64 meters), the 29-year-old farmer's son from Wales has turned short stature ioto an advantage and become the game's most dominant player this season, with eight individual victories and two major team titles. "I'm not really surprised at my success," Woosnam said, "I always knew I had the ability. But I am surprised it has all come together in the same year."

"He's a natural," said a former Masters champion, Ben Crenshaw.
"He's a natural," said a former Masters champion, Ben Crenshaw.
"A little guy who hits the ball a long way and keeps on fighting." Woosnam's winning season began at the Hong Kong Open in March, to be fullowed almost immediately by victory in the first event of the European PGA Tour, the Jersey Open. Then came titles across Europe. He was 19 under par winning the Madrid Open, 20 under at the Sottsh-Open, 24 under when he won the Lancôme Tropby in France. A 9-over finish at the Spanish Open was his only time above par for 72 holes. Next, Woosnam played a starring role as Europe retained the Ryder Cup against the United States at Muirfield Village, Ohio. Then he became the first Briton to capture the prestigious World Matchplay Championship. In mid-November, he won the World Cup individual title by five shots in Hawaii, while he and David Llewellyn, in a major upset, captured the team title for Wales.

"That was, of course, very special. But I consider the Ryder Cup my most treasured event of the year," he said. "It was such an experience to be a part of something no other European team had done before, win the Ryder Cup oo American soil."

Nn other golfer has had a year like Woosnam's, which he closed by winning the biggest prize in golf history, the winner-take-all Million Dollar Challenge in South Africa. Of 22 tournaments entered, he finished in the money 20 times, with 14 top-10 finishes. His stroke average was 69.81. He led the European tour in driving distance at 275 yards (251.4 meters), 11 yards more than when he took the title in 1985. "Some of the big guys lose a lot of power because their halance isn't right," he said. "If you are short and compact, you have good balance. It makes your swing access easi-er." But, he added, "It's all down to my putting, really. For the last couple of years, I'd been playing well from ice to green but the putts wouldn't go in. This year, I have not played any differently but I've holed the putts."

Despite this contention, his

The goal yet to be obtained is to become the world's top-ranked player. He knows that won't be easy, at least until he wins one of the four majors: the Masters, the British Open, the U.S. Open or the PGA Tournament. Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches OAKLAND, California - Ralph Sampson made his debut Thursday night with the Gniden State Wartiors and, although the 7-foot-4-inch (2.23-meter) center could not halt the National Basketball Association team's dismal decline, he kindled hope for hrighter days.

GOTEBORG, Sweden - Mais Wilander and Anders Jarryd mastered their Indian opponents Friday to give Sweden an expected 2-0 lead over India after the opening singles matches in the Davis Cup tennis final.

Wilander, who had beaten Ramesh Krishnan on outdoor clay, grass and hard court in the three matches they had played since 1985, got another victory on indoor clay as he prevailed 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 over India's top player. Jarryd, making his Davis Cup final debut in singles, also woo in one of the game's most elegant shotmakers, had oot played ou clay for three years. It was his eighth setback in as many matches against Jarryd. Sweden, playing its fifth straight Davis Cup final, can clinch its fourth title by winning the daubles match on Sanurday. Sweden won the cap for the first time in 1975, when Bjorn Borg was on the team, and in 1984 and 1985. As expected, Wilander was never really challenged by Krishnan, India's No. 1 player. The Swede proved far too steady from the back court, and he was broken only once during the match, which lasted less than two hours.

Wilander, hoping to finally win a big one after losing in the French Open, the U.S. Open and the Masand brought the crowd to its feet ters finals earlier this year, got off to a perfect start, breaking Krish-nan's serve for 1-0 leads in the first with a dunk. Woosnam intends to play eight U.S. tournaments next season, including the three U.S. majors, but he will not go to the pre-qualifying school to get his U.S. tour card. "I think I'm a good enough player oot to have to," he said. "Having won" eight tournaments, "if I cannot get the invitations I want, I think it's going to be their loss." He will oot play the U.S. tour full-time because, he said, be can carn just as much in Europe. And, staying close to bome has its appeal. "I want my son, Danied, to go to school in this country. And I wouldn't want to leave, either," he said. "I was born just seven miles [11 kilometers] from here and all my family and friends still live in the area. Where else could I go to a local puh and no one bothers me?" area. Where else could I go to a local puh and no one bothers me?" Woosnam admits, too, to being irritated by U.S. officials. "I don't like their attitude sometimes," he said. "They think their players and their tournaments are the best. Yet we have beaten them twice successively in the Ryder Cup. And, surely, the British Open has got to be the best major to win, because it is the only one with all the top players. I don't know how they can even call the U.S. Open a major.

players. I don't know how they can even call the U.S. Open a major. They allow so few overseas exemptions compared with our open." The determination to succeed began at an early age, he said. "I remember boxing tournaments I entered at holiday camp. Although I was always the smallest in my age group. I used to win every time. It was sheer determination. It didn't matter how big the opponents were.

was shear determination. It didn't matter now nig the opponents were. My mother said I even got into a fight on my first day at school." Growing up on a farm helped develop his strength: "I carried hay bales, drove tractors, cleaned out cow sheds and dug ditches. If you are a farmer's son, you can't be a weakling or you don't survive." But if farming gave Woosnam his durability, the mental side of his game did not come together until five years ago, at the 1982 Nigerian Open. "Before that, I had a terrihle temper. I broke putters over my knee, smashed my bag, all kinds of things," be said. "Then I suddenly realized I was expecting too much of myself. I began to accept the bad shots and immediately became more relaxed."

Later that year he won his first tournament, the Swiss Open. He had been inspired, he said, by watching Bjorn Borg play tennis. "He never been inspired, he said, by watching bjorn borg play lennis. "He never got flustered. Whenever I got angry thereafter, I thought how Borg would react and tried to copy him. Every time I lost my temper, I realized it was costing me dollar bills."

Righetti Rejects Offer by Tokyo

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Dave Righetti, who seems to be the most aggressively pursued free agent in major league baseball in the last three years. Thursday night re-jected an offer to pitch in Japan. But that decision did little to clarify his status. With the New York Yankees, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the California Angels among the teams seeking his services, Righetti must decide by midnight Saturday if be will accept the Yankces' offer of salary arhitratinn. lodications were growing stronger that he would. Agent Bill Goodstein said the Tokyn Giants' offer, reportedly worth between $2 million and $10 million, was rejected because Righetti wants "to continue his playing career in the Unit-ed States in 1988." Limiting the statement to 1988, Goodstein continued to dwell on the possibility that Righetti would sign a new contract for only one year. The lawyer has said that Righerti has little to gain from a two-year contract and instead likely would opt for salary arbitration, thus retaining his right to be a free agent again next year.

POSTCARD

Greetings for the World By Paul Lewis

New York Tunies Service NEW YORK - Ask Kathryne Andrews how many shopping days are left until Christmas, and she may well ask, "What year?" Some of her concerns are even more complex and exotic. For example: How many working days remain before Hindus start celebrating Diwali, the Festival of Lights, in 1989, or until Moslems end their Ramadan fast that year? And, for that matter, what kind of pictures will Jews, Moslems, Christians, Hindus and Buddhists fancy in two years' time?

Andrews is the chief of art and design for the United Nations Children's Fund, UNICEF, which 33 35 spends $400 million annually helping poor children around the world. raising slightly under 10 percent of 38 . that money hy selling greeting 39 / cards.

Together with Ejgil E. Christen-40 sen, the director of the greeting-card operation, and a staff of 144, Andrews is already at work prepar-41 ing the cards UNICEF will be sell-42 ing to just about every faith on Earth in 1989. UNICEF also markets nonreligious general-purpose cards, along with diaries and statio-45 nerv.

> Sales of UNICEF greeting cards total about 122 million a year, with Christmas cards accounting for about 80 percent of the total. And the profits, currently $30 million. help swell the coffers of UNICEF. which is otherwise entirely dependent on voluntary donations by governments and individuals.

"This is a United Nations success story," said Christensen. "We're running a very good husi-ness operation with a 40 percent profit margin, and it all goes for a children's charity.

In the United States this year. about 18 million UNICEF Christmas cards and about 100,000 Hanukkah cards will be sold. In Europs, where UNICEF faces less competition from commercial greeting-card makers, sales will be dren of her war-torn village, higher: close to 80 million cards of It was this sift that cave all types. And in the Soviet Union, some 4 million UNICEF cards will be bought to mark the Christmas-New Year holiday season.

UNICEF will sell is a lengthy, deli-cate process involving subtle judg-out of the second World War," drews, who has a master's degree in art history from Columbia University and who spent 11 years at the Brooklyn Museum, tours the world looking for suitable pictures for cards or commissioning artists to paint them. All the artists donate their works.

After that, the thousand or so designs she collects are slowly whittled down to the couple of bundred that UNICEF will print and sell. As she looks at 1989, Andrews is interested in Christmas cards for countries where December is hot, not cold. One picture she likes, by Maria Soledad Folch, a Chilean artist is entitled "Papa Noel de Vacaciones." ft shows Santa Claus sunning himself on a beach while his reindeer romp in the surf.

But there are limits to how far Andrews can go. "Australians and New Zealanders mostly come from England," she said. "They expect to see snow on their Christmas cards even if they spend Christmas Day on the beach."

SELECTING Islamic greeting cards is particularly sensitive, and UNICEF had one early consign-ment rejected by Saudi Arabia because the Koranie text chosen was deemed inappropriate. "Now we generally avoid script and settle for reproductions of fine tiles and rugs or pictures of flowers and hirds in an Islamic style," Andrews said. In 1989, Jews will be able to buy a Hanukkah card that shows a snowflake, a menorah and the Star of David. And since 1989 will be the Year of the Scroent, Buddhists will be offered an array of writhing snakes in the auspicious colors of red and gold.

The most famous UNICEF card, however, shows a group of brightly dressed girls dancing around a Maypole under a smiling, red-lipped sun. It was painted in 1946 by Jitka Samkova, a 7-year-old Czechoslovak who sent it to UNI-CEF as a thank-you for milk the agency had delivered to the chil-It was this gift that gave UNI-CEF the idea of going into the greeting-card business to support its work. To date, more than 2 billion UNICEF cards have been Designing the greeting cards sold. "UNICEF and its cards are

Hard Times for a Hit Man Out in the Cold

"You come in alive and go out dead." - Mafia motto, according to Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratianno

By Steve Coll Washington Pros Service SEATTLE - Visibly nervous, pressing his back against the door, surely Jimmy Fratianno is remembering that, when he killed people for a living, he sometimes did it just like this. He lured his victims - just as he has now been lured - into a silent, solitary room, closed the door and then strangled them with a rope. He wanted to meet this way: oo photographers, no bodyguards, just one on one in a hotel room. Sull, when the door clicks behind him and his eyes dance from corner to corner, searching, it is clear that he is making an assessment.

"It will never stop," a calmer Fratianno says of his fear a few minutes later. He has settled in a chair, satisfied that the room contains only a reporter. "It's a Commission contract." he says - a contract on his life, that is, put out by the organized crime families against whom Fratianno has testified during his decade-long and recently terminated career as a government witness. Fratianno pronounces these words nbout the threat on his life plainly, without alfectation, hut after all the movies and novels and mini-series - all the mythmaking -it is hard to take the cliebe about a "contract" seriously. Consider that Jimmy Fratianno has admitted strangling three men and shooting two others in the back of the head, and yet recently he went on the Oprah Winfrey television show to promote his second hook. He has not read his second book. however, or his first, or any other book in his life.

During his 74 years, hy his and other corroborating accounts, he has gamhled at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas with its late proprietor, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel; eaten lunch in Los Angeles with Mena-chem Begin and then helped steal $1 million collected for Israel at a Hollywood fund-raiser, and spent 20 years in prison over three different stretches. He has extorted, philandered, autographed a book for Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d and helped send about a dozen Mafia bosses to prison hy testifying for the government.

"I'm just washed up now, you know," Jimmy Fratianto says plaintively in the airport hotel room. "I'd like to feel secure at this stage of the game." He has come to air his complaints about the way the government has treated him. He has one thing to ask of the American people. He would like to be taken care of unul he dies The source of his anger is the Justice Department's decision, disclosed earlier this year, to remove Fratianno from the payroll of the government's witness protection program, known as WITSEC. Frauanno joined WITSEC in 1978 when he traded a half-century career in crime for a new life as a professional witness, book collaborator, murder target and occasional talk show guest.

When the decision to bounce Fratianno out of WITSEC was disclosed last summer. the Justice Department said it was oecessary because "everyone is terminated from the program sooner or later" and because taxpayers had already doled out about $1 million to support Fratianno.

Fratianno vehemently disputes the SI million figure. He says the total amount of money spent hy the government during the decade he was a protected witness comes to only about $500,000. Asked to respond to Fratianno's accusations, a Justice Department spokesman, John Russell, backs away from the S1 million number. "At first, yes, I think the figures that were given to me showed that it was either close to or more than $1 million. I think it's short of $1 million. It's bard to figure out when you ask the Marshals Service to come up with figures. I don't trust these figures."

Russell praises Fratianno's work as a federal prosecution witness in major organized-crime trials in Los Angeles, Kansas City, New York, Florida, Cleveland and elsewhere. "He did this country a great service," Russell says. "But it was felt that the time had come when the government should no longer pay his subsistence." Fratianno's allies in and out of government -- policemen and former prosecutors who became unlikely friends of the former mohster at the trials where Fratianno testified - say that the decision to exile the Weasel is unfair, and bad policy as well. They argue that Fratianno's treatment will discourage other Mafia leaders from becoming government witnesses.

Moods pass rapidly over Fratianno, who in several hours shifts effortlessly from anger to whining self-pity, from helplessness to a hustler's savvy. It is impossible to be sure what Fratianno really believes. He has been conning for a long time and he knows what the people want to hear. On the touchy topic of murder, for example, he passes off a line or two that he has often repeated. Sure, he killed a few guys, he says, but he was only following orders. And besides, the only people he had it coming.

Born in Cleveland in 1913 to a poor, bard-working, law-abiding, hut apparently cruel family, he began hustling in the streets before he was 15. He was sent to secure some of Los Angeles's hurgeoning prison for armed rohbery at 24. In his 74 gamhling trade for the Chicago crime fam-years, he has committed and endured more outrages than the average Third World dietator - and yet none of it has sunk in.

"This is an adolescent personality," says Michael Zuckerman, the journalist who collaborated on Fratianno's recent book (Zuckerman interviewed Fratianno extensively and did all the writing, the same method used hy the journalist Ovid Demaris, who co-wrote Fratianno's first book, "The Last Mafioso,") "He never understood joy or hatred or what it took to take a human life."

The prime of Fratianno's life was a strange, exhilarating, horrifying time. Re-leased from prison in Ohio in 1945, he drifted to Los Angeles in search of money and warm weather. Los Angeles then was a sprawling, raucous boom town infected by the spirit of Hollywood and the promise of victory in World War II. Gambling joints and nightclubs were springing up on Sunever "clipped," to use the term of art he set Strip - neon social halls for starlets prefers, were other gangsters - guys who and hangers-on and soldiers home from the Pacific.

It was a good time to hustle,

Fratianno fell in with Johnny Roselli, who had been sent west hy Al Capone to

ily. Roselli's gang tried to muscle in on Mickey Cohen, the Hollywood-connected gamhling impresario who controlled most of the Strip's illicit business.

Over the years. Fratianno harely scratched out a living. He was present for the founding of modern Las Vegas in the late 1940s, but his Los Angeles family was about the only major organized crime group that failed to secure a profitable ownership interest in one of the new casinos there. "Vegas was our town," Fratianno laments. "We just never could get lucky up there."

"Frankly, Fratianno was not a very successful member of the Mafia," says Denny Walsh, a reporter for The Sacramento Bee who has tracked West Coast organized crime figures for years. "His career as a criminal is noteworthy more for its failures than for its accomplishments. He always had these great schemes, but very seldom did they pay dividends."

In the late 1970s, following his third stretch in prison, the murder of his friend Roselli and some jostling inside the L.A. crime organization, Fratianno was made acting boss of the L.A. family. He also became the target of a murder contract.

Frightened and under pressure from federal agents, Fratianno made his decision to turn state's evidence. In his early debriefings, be solved for prosecutors a dozen murders dating back 30 years and identi-fied every major Mafia leader in the country. For the government, the bounty was unprecedented. For Fratianno, it wasn't a bad deal either - he served only about a year in prison before traveling the country as a prosecution witness.

Fratiano's only asset, according to Zuck-erman and others who know him, is a modest home in an undisclosed location. Zuckerman thinks Fratianno has about $40,000 in the bank, hut no real income other than Social Security. He recently lost more than $70,000 in a failed car dealership venture with a relative. He is supposed to share in the profits of his new book, but none have been forthcoming so far.

He is still hustling, always trying to make a few bucks off an infamous name. "Now, my wife is going to write a book on her past, living with me," he says, apropos of nothing in particular.

But at least he doesn't confuse reality with the Hollywood version. Asked about the confluence of his life and the fictional world of Mario Puzo's "The Godfather." he only laughs.

"It ain't even close," he says. "You know, this guy Puzo knew somebody who told him some things. But it ain't even

Why not? "They dramatize it. Too many killings," Jimmy Fratianno says.
